Established in 1969, the Fitzgerald Marine Reserve was created to protect hundreds of marine plant and animal species. To date, scientists have discovered 25 new marine invertebrate and plant species here. A colorful variety of seaweed, crabs, sponges, anemones, sea stars, mollusks, and fish can be seen at low tide. The Reserve is also home to shorebirds, harbor seals, and the occasional sea otter. In addition to many Monterey cypress trees and eucalyptus trees, FMR includes northern coastal bluff scrub, arroyo willow riparian corridors, and freshwater marsh.

Marine life in the Reserve is protected, and touching and collecting is prohibited. Be sure to stay at least 300 feet away from any marine mammal.
